

Why Is It So Hard To Make a Good Decision: Managing the Dynamics That Make Decisions Difficult (Strategic Decisions Monthly Book 1)

Making smart decisions is difficult; making smart decisions about highly complex situations involving significant levels of uncertainty is exceedingly difficult. The success rates for senior leaders making complex decisions is eye-opening; 35-50% of the decisions fail to accomplish the objectives. Why is it that decisions which seem to be relatively straightforward can take so much time and energy, and result in a “compromise” solution, a mediocre plan, and ill-will between team members? Its because of poorly managed Decision Dynamics. Read this article to learn about the 5 Decision Dynamics and how to manage them better.
