

Bright: Seeing superstars, listening to their worlds, and moving out of the way

The world is getting smarter. Children born today are more intelligent, more sensitive, more capable, and accomplish far more than in the past... But this high capacity doesn't guarantee high performance. What can we do—as parents, professionals, and educators—to see these superstars, listen to their worlds, and move out of the way of brilliance? Alan answers these questions through professional and personal experience, fresh insights from the latest research, and boldness in moving toward a brighter future.
